

ALEXANDRIA.

THURSDAY EVENING, MARCH 5.

BUSINESS PROSPECTS. - The return of Spring, the completion of the Canal Aqueduct, the opening of the Alexandria Canal, the revival of the Coal trade at this place, the opening of the navigation of the Potomac, the commencement of operations at the Fishing landings, of which the Fish Wharf is the great depot, the activity and enterprise of our merchants and mechanics, and other causes, lead us to entertain the most favorable anticipations as to a speedy revival and an increase of the trade, commerce, and manufactures of Alexandria. We need not add with what satisfaction and joy we hail the prospect, and how fondly we indulge the hope that our good old town-our native place and life-long homemay once more start on a career of prosperity, which will be constant and continuous, and have no farther checks or disappointments .-Let us all act together, with harmony and good will, for that purpose!

Mr. Anthony has offered a resolution in the Senate proposing that during the Impeachment trial, no person shall be admitted to the galleries except on tickets issued daily by the Sergeantat-Arms, not exceeding the number that can be accommodated with seats, leaving the passages entirely free; that tickets shall be issued to the foreign legations; that each Senator shall be entitled to four tickets; each member of the House to two; the Chief Justice and each Judge of the Supreme Court of the U. S. to two; the Chief Justice and each judge of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, and each judge of the Court of Claims to two; the reporters of the press to have sixty tickets, and the remainder to be distributed by the Sergeant at arms, who is authorized to carry out these regulations, and to employ, under directions of the Committee of Contingent Expenses, sufficient force for the preservation of order.

The National Intelligencer thinks that "Macaulay is responsible for the whole of the tomfoolery in the Capitol at Washington, about the Impeachment. Members have been reading his account of the trial of Warren Hastings, and are imagining that they can figure like Burke, Sheridan, and the rest of the glorious group, in that celebrated case." We wish Macaulay was alive to write an account of President Johnson's trial as a contrast to that of Hastings. How the "glow worms of the hour," would "pale their ineffectual fires!"

The general impression row is that the President will be required to appear before the Senate about Thursday of next week, and that that a time, say 20 to 30 days, will be allowed him to prepare his defence, and at the expiration of that period the trial will commence and progress regularly, from day to day, to the

THE IMPEACHMENT PROSECUTION.

Views of Chief Instice Chase.

The following communication was yesterday sent to the Senate by Chief Justice Chase, giving his views in relation to the prosecution of impeachment:

To the Senate of the United States:

Inasmuch as the sole power to try impeachment is vested by the Constitution in the Senate, and it is made the duty of the Chief Justice to preside when the President is on trial, I take the liberty of submitting, very respectfully, some observations in respect to the proper mode of proceedings upon the impeachment which has been preferred by the House of Representatives against the President now in

That when the Senate sits for the trial of an impeachment it sits as a court, seems unques-

That for the trial of an impeachment of the President, this court must be constituted of the members of the Senate, with the Chief Justice presiding, seems equally unquestiona-

The Federalist is regarded as the highest cotemporary authority on the construction of trial of impeachments" are examined. In a so at an early day. paragraph explaining the reasons for not uniting "the Supreme Court with the Senate in the formation of the court of impeachments,' it is observed that "to a certain extent the benefits of that union will be obtained from making the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court the president of the court of impeach ments, as is proposed in the plan of the Convention, while the inconveniences of an entire incorporation of the former into the latter will be substantially avoided." This was, perhaps, the prudent mean.

This authority seems to leave no doubt upon either of the propositions just stated. And the statement of them will serve to introduce the question upon which I think it my duty to state the result of my reflections to the Senate, namely: At what period, in the case of an impeachment of the President, should the court of impeachment organize under oath, as directed by the Constitution?

It will readily suggest itself to any one who reflects upon the abilities and the learning in the law which distinguish so many Senators, that besides the reason assigned in the Federalist, there must have been still another for the provision requiring the Chief Justice to preside in the court of impeachment. Under the Constitution, in case of a vacancy in the office of President, the Vice President succeeds, and it was doubtless thought prudent and benefitting that the next in succession should not preside in a proceeding through which a vacancy might be created.

It was not doubted that the Senate, while sitting in its ordinary capacity, must necessarily receive from the House of Representatives some notice of its intention to impeach the President at its bar; but it does not seem to me an unwarrantable opinion, in view of this constitutional provision, that the organization of the Senate as a court of impeachment under the Constitution should precede the actual announcement of the impeachment on the part of

And it may, perhaps, be thought a still less unwarranted opinion that articles of impeachment should only be presented to a court of impeachment; that no summons or other proceedings should issue except from the organized court; and that rules for the government of the proceedings of such a court should be framed only by the court itself.

I have found myself unable to come to any other conclusions than these. I can assign no reason for requiring the Senate to organize as a court under any other than its ordinary presiding officer for the latter proceedings upon an impeachment of the President, which does not seem to me to apply equally to the earlier.

I am informed that the Senate has proceeded upon other views; and it is not my purpose to contest what its superior wisdom may have directed. All good citizens will fervently pray that no occasion may ever arise when the grave proceedings now in progress will be cited as a precedent; but it is not impossible that such an occasion may come.

Inasmuch, therefore, as the Constitution has charged the Chief Justice with an important function in the trial of an impeachment of the President, it has seemed to me fitting and obligatory, where he is unable to concur in the views of the Senate concerning matters essential to the trial, that his respectful dissent S. P. CHASE, should appear.

Congress. In the Senate, yesterday, a communication from Chief Justice Chase in relation to the proper mode of proceeding in the trial of the President on the impeachment charges, was referred to a select committee. The bill providing for the extension of the Capitol grounds was taken up, amended and passed. At 1 o'clock p. m. the managers of impeachment appeared, and Mr. Bingham announced that the managers were ready to present the articles of impeachment. After proclamation by the Sergeant-at-Arms the articles were presented and read by Mr. Bingham. The President of the Senate announced that that body would take action on them, and give due notice to the House. A resolution was adopted providing that at one o'clock to-day the Senate shall proceed to consider the impeachment of President Johnson, and the oath provided by the Constitution shall be administered to each Senator by Chief Justice Chase, and that the House be notified of this resolution. Messrs. Pomeroy, Wilson and Buckalew were appointed a committee to wait on the Chief Justice and notify him of a trial of impeachment, over which he is expected to preside, and to escort him to the Chair. The Senate then adjourned.

In the House of Representatives, the consideration of the additional article of impeachment proposed by Mr. Jenckes, was resumed. After some discussion it was referred to the Managers for consideration. The House then went into Committee of the Whole, Mr. Dawes being called to the Chair, and, preceded by the Managers, marched in a body to the Senate for the purpose of presenting the articles of impeachment to that body. None of the Democratic mained in their seats in the House, as did also Messrs. F. Thomas and Van Wyck of the Republican members. The members of the House returned at ten minutes of two o'clock, and Mr. Dawes, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole, reported their action. The Committee on Printing reported favorably on Senate bill in relation to the promulgation of the laws of the United States by printing them, and regulating the manner of such printing; and the same was passed. The House then took up the election case from the First District of Tennessee. The resolution of the Committee on Elections declares Mr. R. R. Butler entitled to the seat, and as he is unable to take the oath of office, it shall be administered in a modified form. After a long discussion the subject was laid over. Business Affairs in Virginia.—The numerous cases in bankruptcy during the last month have had a depressing effect on the merchants, from the fact that they are in daily receipt of notices from their customers whom they had credited for various articles, on the faith of the incoming crops. Some rather hard cases are spoken of. Many persons have hurried into bankruptcy from the belief that after the 1st of March the conditions would not be so liberal. It appears now, however, to be generally settled among the legal gentlemen that debtors may make an unconditional sursender of their property at any time before the month of June. Had they been aware of this. it is hard to suppose that planters would have been equally indifferent to the settlement of obligations recently contracted to enable them to make a final effort, and those of a period dating years back. But in the present condition of the country it would be uncharitable to judge any man harshly. It is now a settled point ity of beginning the world anew. Looking at the matter in a humane, if not in a legal aspect, it is to be regretted that such a large amount of fees is necessary to enable the bankrupt to file a petition. It is only a small a hundred and fifty doilars.
